Senator Urges Open Palestine To Homeless

Senator Robert F. Wagner, Democrat, of New York, declared in a radio speech that the impending collapse of the Nazi regime at last provided a chance to rescue some of the victims of Hitler tyranny.

"Until recently," he said, "we of necessity stood helplessly by. We could find few means of rescue except to destroy the tyrants who perpetrated these crimes. But at long last one of Hitler's satellites has given some evidence that it is aware of the judgment of mankind.

"Premier Horthy of Hungary has announced that Jews possessed of immigration visas to Palestine will be allowed to escape from the Hungarian death trap. This announcement affords an opportunity for rescue which must be eagerly grasped. It must not be frustrated by technicalities and formalities."

Through "bitter failures and mistakes," the Senator added,

Press Chief Calls Nazis "Moderate" To Jews

The spontaneous outcry in the neutral press against the barbarous measures taken against the Jews of Hungary has not been without effect in Nazi quarters. Instead of the customary contemptuous indifference to external opinion of Jews, the German Deputy Press Chief, Helmut Sundermann, dealt almost apologetically with the treatment of the Jews at a press conference. His statement was broadcast by the German overseas radio.

In "explanation" of the German attitude Sundermann referred to a letter which he alleged had been sent by Dr. Weizmann to the late Mr. Neville Chamberlain on the outbreak of the war, assuring him that the Jews were on the side of Britain and would fight on Britain's side.

The measures taken against the Jews were at first very moderate, he said. They were allowed to emigrate from Germany until the autumn of 1940. The Yellow Star to be worn by Jews was not introduced until 1941.

This measure was followed later by the isolation of the Jews and their incorporation in the European production system, in accordance with their professional training, he went on. They were placed at the disposal of various bodies, like the Todt Organization, or were [illegible] to farms. Like other manpower thus employed, they were housed in camps. After having been put to work, the Jews were no longer under the control of the State police.

Boston Police Instructed On Conduct

Instructions to Boston police on how to deal with racial and religious disturbances have been issued by the Governor's Committee on Racial and Religious Understanding. This committee was appointed several months ago as a consequence of physical violence against Jews in Boston suburbs.

The Boston Jewish Advocate reports that Boston police have received pamphlets, jointly prepared by the Governor's Committee on Police Co-ordination, designed to assist them in discovering and handling racial and religious outbreaks. In addition, Boston Police will receive a series of six or more lectures.

Apart from these committees, a Greater Boston Community Relations Committee and several other committees are being formed with similar aims in view.

Four Dorchester High School boys charged with anti-Semitic rioting were described by Judge Francis S. Wyner of Dorchester Court as "instrumentalities used by subversive forces." In the case of two of the defendants, the court accepted the plea of Jacob Levy, attorney for the Good Neighbor Association, for leniency, after the families of the two boys expressed their regret at the youths' participation in the riot.

The third boy was declared guilty without any extenuating circumstances and placed in custody of his parents under $100 bail. The court declared that it could not be lenient with the fourth boy because of the seriousness of his offense [illegible]

MEXICO WILL HELP WITH REFUGEE PORT

Moses A. Leavitt, secretary of the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, was in Mexico City, discussing the establishment of a "free port" for Jewish refugees from Europe with officials of the Mexican government and leaders of the Jewish community of Mexico. The Mexican government recently announced that it was planning to establish a refugee center similar to the one opened by the United States government at Fort Ontario.

Mr. Leavitt reports that he was much encouraged by the attitude of the Mexican officials, and stated that "Mexico is deeply sympathetic with the tragic plight of Jews in occupied Europe, as evidenced by its desire to establish a 'free port.'" He praised Mexico for its "humanitarian spirit" and pointed out that "it has become traditional with Mexico to offer asylum and refuge to those suffering from persecution in their own homeland."

Mr. Leavitt was encouraged also by the positive attitude of the leaders of the Comite Central Israelita de Mexico and their desire to cooperate actively in the relief and rescue of stricken Jews overseas, especially as carried out by the J. D. C.

Urge Refugee Centre Set Up In Palestine, End Of British Mandate

As resolutions were introduced in the U. S. Senate and House asking the President and the Secretary of State to persuade Great Britain to allow establishment of refugee centers in Palestine, Representative Emanuel Cellar, Democrat, of New York, urged the Dumbarton Oaks conference to put an end to Great Britain's sole mandatory power over that country.

The resolution offered in both houses of Congress came as a result of acceptance by the [illegible] States and the United [illegible] of the offer of the Hungarian [illegible] ernment to release the [illegible] that country.

Representative Cellar's [illegible] tion that the mandatory [illegible] be changed was made to [illegible] to Edward R. Stating that the "mandate [illegible] tem that emanated from [illegible] League of Nations turned [illegible] be a dismal failure," Representative Cellar suggested that [illegible] future the mandate over [illegible] try be entrusted to a [illegible] of two or more states. He [illegible] mended that the mandate [illegible] after be a united nations [illegible] ship, with a group of at [illegible] major powers combining [illegible] minor power.

He criticized severely Britain's mandate over P[illegible] mentioning the British [illegible] Paper, which excludes [illegible] Jews in Palestine as [illegible] property rights above [illegible] rights."

New Zionist Head Calls Z.O.A. Weak

Abolition of the British mandate over Palestine and establishment of that country under international guardianship, with the Jewish people as its administrators, were asked by the New Zionist Organization of America in a statement sent to the Dumbarton Oaks conference.

Col. Morris J. Mendelsohn, president of the organization, charged that the system of mandates had served to cloak imperialistic ambitions and was not compatible with a world planning to live in peace.

Calling the Jewish problem

Poland will still have a considerable Jewish population, in spite of the appalling slaughter of Jews, which has inflicted irreparable losses on Polish Jewry, said one of the leaders of the Underground Movement in Poland (a non-Jew), now on a visit to the Soviet Union, in the course of an interview he gave to the Jewish Soviet Press Agency in Moscow.

Many Jewish families, he believes, will reappear from the forests, where they are now in hiding, and many thousands of Jewish workers will return from Soviet Russia, and will have an opportunity of establishing a decent existence for themselves. The overwhelming majority of them are now productive workers, and have learned new trades, which will be of the greatest help in restoring Poland's ruined economic life.

The leaders of the future Poland, he said, will follow the example of those great democratic countries where Jews enjoy full equality of rights. The Polish people want to be part of a world democracy, and will have nothing to do with the anti-Semites who have been so prominent in Polish affairs, and to some extent still are in the London Government.

Asked if there were any Jewish parties in the Underground Movement in Poland, and what were their relations to each other, and their connection with the movement among the Poles, the underground leader replied:

"I cannot give you a detailed answer, but I can give some general information. I myself was in contact for some time with the leader of the P.P.R., the Polish Workers' Party, in the Ghetto, a heroic woman known as Nelka. This section co-operated with the Poale Zion and a number of Zionist youth organizations, like Hashomer Hatzair and Hechalutz. It was this combination of workers' groups which decided on the plans which led to the heroic rising in the Warsaw Ghetto.

"In addition to the active workers in the Jewish section of the P.P.R., my friends maintained contact during the Warsaw Ghetto rising with the [illegible] of the Jewish National Council. These lived outside the Ghetto walls, [illegible] Polish [illegible] They had [illegible] them on Christmas, [illegible] by representatives of the

Montreal Meetings

● A correspondent of the Canadian Jewish Congress in Russia will visit Vilna and Lublin to inquire about the condition of the Jews remaining in that city after the Nazi occupation. This correspondent has been in Russia for several months and has been instrumental in locating the relatives of a number of Canadian Jews in Roumania. Their names and addresses were sent to the Congress in Montreal which got in touch with the Canadian relatives. Steps are being taken to transmit assistance to these relatives from Canada. The reports of the Congress representative on the Jews of Vilna and other centres will be made available to the general public on this continent through the Congress and through Jewish news agencies. The Congress has under way a considerable program designed to re-establish contact between Jewish refugees and their relatives in Canada. Recently David Weinberg, of Montreal, was informed of the whereabouts of a relative with whom he had lost touch since he left Ostrov, Poland, fifteen years ago. Now this young man was located by the Congress in Italy, a driver with Royal Army Service Corps Unit of the Palestinian troops.

Refugees At U. S. Camp Form Own Community

[illegible] the 982 European refugees [illegible] in their temporary [illegible] Fort Ontario, Oswego, [illegible] America has offered a se[illegible] of surprises. Miss Anna Kauf[illegible] and Mrs. Esther Beckwith [illegible] of the National Council [illegible] Jewish Women who returned [illegible] the eighty-four-acre shelter, [illegible] the people's joy at sleeping [illegible] mattresses instead of boards, [illegible] wonder at the abundance [illegible].

[illegible] of them were amazed to [illegible] private rooms—they had not [illegible] such comfort for ten or [illegible] years," Miss Kaufman said. [illegible] then, she said, the people [illegible] established a kindergarten [illegible] by their own members, and [illegible] formed squads to work in the [illegible] hospital and kitchens.

No attempt is being made, Miss Kaunitz said, to force any American ideas upon the people—particularly since everyone realizes they are here for the duration only. "The whole emphasis is being placed upon the maintenance of the people's own way of living," she sad pointing out that the people have arranged their own recreational activities and are conducting their own religious services. "With pepper and other spices," she added, "they even manage to make the American food taste more like their old familiar dishes."

In June, for instance, 20,000 food parcels arrived there from Portugal. Negotiations are in progress with the Red Cross about the dispatch of food parcels to other Jewish camps, Sundermann stated.

Peace would reign in the world only after an international quarantine had been introduced against Jewry, as Jews were always in the background sending others to [illegible] said he was confident that Great Britain would see the wisdom and justice of the demand for establishment of emergency shelters in Palestine. He said his indorsement of the shelter program has no political significance. Representative McCormack thought Congressional adoption of th. resolution might move the British to give permission for the wartime shelters of Hungarian Jews. He suggested that the shelters be modeled on the refugee camp at Fort Ontario, Oswego, N.Y.

Peter Bergson, chairman of the Hebrew Committee of National Liberation, issued a statement remarking that his Committee had urged the British government to set up such shelters. Rabbi Baruch Korff, director of the rescue division of the Emergency Committee to Save the Jewish People of Europe, also commended the resolution.

SENATOR URGES

much of the world had come to understand that any solution to the problem of European Jewish refugees was meaningless without the inclusion of Palestine as a sanctuary.

"The shelter camps set up in this country, in Turkey, or elsewhere, welcome as they are," he continued, "are by their very nature temporary and leave the problem of real rescue from tyranny unsolved, or at best delayed. And no solution is in sight which does not provide a permanent sanctuary in Palestine for the disinherited Jews of Europe."

The Senator rejected the contention that Palestine was too small to accommodate the Jews who might seek refuge there.

"That opinion," he said, "is not based on fact. Dr. Walter C. Lowdermilk, assistant chief of the United States Soil Conservation Service, has made an intensive study in which he estimates that Palestine can absorb 4,000,000 immigrants.

"We know that Palestine in biblical days held a population of around 4,000,000, and that was before the advent of the tractor and scientific farming. Belgium is only a little larger than Palestine, yet it has a population of over 8,000,000."

Senator Wagner said it was "a great thing" that the "[illegible]" Chamberlain White Paper of 1939, which restricted Jewish immigration into Palestine, "should prevent the Jews of Palestine from throwing out a life-line to their suffering brethren in Europe."

"President Roosevelt has already expressed America's disapproval of the White Paper," he concluded. "Both major parties have included planks in their platforms calling for unrestricted Jewish immigration into Palestine. It is up to the rest of us to see that those fighting words take effect."

JEWISH FIGHTER

Torah from various synagogues. An impressive ceremony, attended by Marshal Tito, marked the handing over of these Scrolls to several Rabbis who had enlisted in the patriot army. During the ceremony Pyade recalled the Serbian proverb: "Every human being is my brother, and his creed is dear to me."

Pyade, relates a Serbian journalist, Milos Popovich, in the Sefardic weekly journal, Hed Hamizrach, comes from a Sefardic family.

While still a student at Belgrade University in 1920, he formed the Left-wing Camp, and organized the illegal Left-wing opposition party, the Socialist Workers.

At various times he has earned his livelihood as an unskilled labourer, a sailor, a driver, and a printer.

Arrested eventually by the police, he was sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment. While in prison he translated into Serbian Karl Marx's "Capital" and Oscar Wilde's "Dorian Grey." He studied Chinese, English, Russian, and Hebrew, and kept in touch with the underground workers' movement.

His association with Marshal Tito began several years before the outbreak of the present war, and ever since these two pillars of the Yugoslav movement of liberation have been the closest friends.

Polish Government in London. But that was the only assistance the Jews had from their representatives.

"Active help was given by our People's Guard. When the Germans mounted guns on Krasinski Square, and near the Danzig station, and began to shell the Ghetto, our men prevented German access to their artillery, and impeded their movement of fresh forces. Our men also fired on the German gunners from the rear.

NEW ZIONIST HEAD

"one of the pivotal points upon which the peace of the world hinges," the statement declares that unless the germs of "pathological Jew hatred,' which served to create Nazism and its consequences, were destroyed, no organization for a permanent peace can be effective.

Under pre-war conditions democratic legislation proved inadequate to check the growth of anti-Semitism, the statement continues. Colonel Mendelsohn attributed the root of this problem to Jewish homelessness.

Palestine must be treated internationally as a Jewish homeland, he said, and the Jewish people must be acknowledged as a full-fledged nation and an ally of the United Nations, with a right to participate in the peace conferences and in setting world problems in which it has a stake.

The statement asked that Jews who have been forcibly evicted from their former lands should not be compelled to return to them. It suggested that they "be granted their wish to be transferred en masse, in the shortest possible period, to Palestine."

Mass transfer must be assisted financially by an international loan granted to the Jewish people, according to the statement. The Axis powers, it adds, must be made to pay reparations for all damage done to life and property of individual Jews as well as to Jewish communities. The statement specifies that these reparations shall be used solely for the reestablishment of the Jewish people in Palestine and for the upbuilding of a Jewish State.

"Great Britain," said Colonel Mendelsohn, "by its promulgation of the White Paper curtailing Jewish immigration into Palestine has indicated that it has no such intention, although Palestine is capable of absorbing [illegible] Jews."

Colonel Mendelsohn criticised the rival Zionist Organization of America for its "weak, vacillating, appeasing, take-what-they-give-us policy." He added: "Even if Great Britain rescinded the White Paper, three-quarters of Palestine would remain closed to the Jewish immigration. The Zionist Organization stands ready to accept this situation. We are not."

PRICES
T.N.T.

To maintain a reasonable balance between what you earn and what your dollars will buy in wartime, it has been necessary to put a ceiling on prices, to control wages, salaries and profits, and to distribute available goods on an equitable basis.

. . . higher costs of production would require higher prices for the things you buy

. . . higher prices would require higher wages and salaries

. . . higher wages and salaries would mean higher costs.

and so on...in an endless spiral

Demands for higher selling prices, wages and profits must not be allowed to push up the cost of living. This would bring distress and confusion on the Home Front, shackle our war effort now, and leave us with handicaps in the peace to come.

This is one of a series being issued by the Government of Canada to emphasize the importance of preventing further increases in the cost of living now and deflation later.
